

CO-DIRECTORS & CO-PRODUCERS EXTENDED BIOS:

AARON CADIEUX, CO-DIRECTOR

Aaron Cadieux is an award-winning documentary filmmaker from Dartmouth, Massachusetts. He attended Dartmouth High School (DHS), where he participated in a television production program under Dartmouth Community Television. During that time, he produced his first award-winning short documentary, Lincoln Park, The Forgotten Fun. Cadieux graduated from DHS in 2001 and pursued a bachelor's degree in communications with a concentration in video production at Fitchburg State College (FSC). In 2003, he produced and directed a 30-minute documentary titled, Inside The Bridgewater Triangle. Years later, the experience would inspire him to produce and direct a feature-length documentary on the same subject. In 2005, during his senior year at FSC, Cadieux produced and directed an award-winning 30-minute documentary, A Time to Reflect, the History of Whalom Park. After graduating from FSC, he founded Big Operations Productions, a dual-division company specializing in freelance video production services, and the production of independent documentary films. In October of 2005, Cadieux became the in-house video production specialist and technical director at R.J. LaChance Advertising LLC/Tin Can Alley Studios in Barrington, Rhode Island. In 2011, he transitioned into a freelance role with R.J. LaChance Advertising, and became the Multimedia Coordinator for Tasca Automotive in Cranston, Rhode Island, where he was responsible for all of the company's in-house video production and graphic design. Also in 2011, Cadieux teamed up with filmmaker Manny Famolare to begin production on The Bridgewater Triangle. In 2013, while The Bridgewater Triangle was still in production, he resigned from his position at Tasca Automotive and launched Bristol County Media (BCM) LLC, and began running his own video production company on a full-time basis. At that time, Big Operations Productions became a sub-division of BCM and the label for Cadieux's independent film productions. In October of 2014, The Bridgewater Triangle was completed and released. As the Co-Director of The Bridgewater Triangle, Cadieux combines his extensive experience in documentary filmmaking and video production with his love for Halloween and things that go bump in the night.

MANNY FAMOLARE, CO-DIRECTOR

Manny Famolare is a lifelong Bridgewater Triangle area resident. He has always had an interest in the paranormal and, by coincidence, eventually learned that he was living in the heart of the Bridgewater Triangle. Famolare has since been investigating the triangle area for over 25 years. He has been featured on radio shows such as Visions of the Past, Voices of the Unknown, Ghost Chronicles, and Spooky Southcoast. A passionate artist, Famolare's photography has been published in countless New England newspapers and online websites including the Newport Daily Times, the Brockton Enterprise, the Taunton Gazette and the Patriot Ledger. As the Co-Director of The Bridgewater Triangle, Famolare combines his passion for tales of the bizarre and his love of the camera.